In 1985 the Alberta Chapter of the American Society of Architectural Historians gave J. Percy Page High School the Award of Excellence for New Buildings in their annual competition. They said the "interior and exterior elements are entirely consistent throughout and the design achieves a remarkable coherence of "structure, function and form" and that it was also "a triumph of accessibility."

Principal's Message

It's been an honour to serve as your principal at J. Percy Page High School. You truly are a resilient and talented group of students. This school year was like no other for all of us – students, staff, parents and the community at large. The coronavirus forced us to do things differently, take us out of our comfort zone. It certainly wasn't easy but you all handled it like stars and we couldn't be more proud.

I am completing my 31st year in education and 13th as an EPBS school principal. This is my second stint as an administrator at J. Percy Page having previously served as an assistant principal back in 2004-2007. I have grown to love this community, the passion that it has for its residents' and its culture. It's been a pleasure to work with the Page students over the years as I have always found them to be honest, hard working and passionate about their goals and dreams. I have no doubt that each one of you will find a place in the world that meets your expectations and hopes. Good luck as you pursue your dreams!

Mr. Darryl Sutherland - Principal

Student Union President's Message

Congratulations to the Class of 2020! After 12 years in the making, this day has finally come. Why is it so special? It's because it marks the end to one of the most difficult journeys that we will ever be a part of. The journey that has required so much hard work and in turn has provided us with great memories. The journey that has shaped us into the amazing people we are today. We celebrate our accomplishments with the people who have supported us through thick and thin. We celebrate with our teachers, our families, and our friends who have become an extension of our family. The end of this incredible journey only results in the commencement of another one.

We will be forever grateful for our memories of this journey. The memories filled with celebration, goodbyes, tears of joy, and ultimately that reflection on how far we have come. However, as we embark on this more uncertain journey, we will utilize all the knowledge that we have gained. We will rely on our experiences to guide us on our way to our goals. Panthers, we walked into our school as individuals and have walked out as a family. These three years have been the greatest of my life, and I am forever thankful to each and everyone of you for making that possible. It's an absolute privilege to have been your President!

Thank you to the graduating class of 2020 for all that you have done. The time has come to begin this new journey and we will do so together. I started off this year with a quote from Theodore Roosevelt, so I see it fitting to end it off with one. "Nothing in the world is worth having unless it takes effort". Although this year has been one of the most difficult due to the Pandemic, it only makes this year even more special. A year of trials and tribulations has only made this accomplishment even more gratifying. I wish you the best of luck on this new chapter in our lives and await to see the heights we will reach.

Thank you,

Preetnam Baddam

Dear J. Percy Page Class of 2020:
COVID-19 has changed a lot of things for you and for us. What hasn't changed is how proud we are of the Class of 2020. We will always honor your accomplishments. We will always remember you as resilient in the face of adversity and as a sign of hope for the future.

Lights, Camera, Action!

Did you know that PageTV started in 2005? At first, PageTV was only once a week broadcast of pre-recorded material from the weekly events. Then a few years later it moved to a daily format. A studio was created in a room in the TCL area which became the home of PageTV. For the past number of years, under the direction of Mr. Chan, students host a daily live morning broadcast with announcements, weather, sports, upcoming event info, shout outs to students and staff and "Amber Time." One of the student anchors, Amber Lee, added a segment to the end of the broadcast stating fun facts and a daily joke or riddle. This became know as "Amber Time" making for an entertaining close to the broadcast. Other regular student contributors were Haniya Ahmed, weather girl, Selemeni Seif Jr, and Georgia Braye, sports announcers. PageTV also has a number of students working behind the scenes running the show like a real TV studio production, keeping Panthers well informed. While the technology and format have evolved, the initial vision of PageTV being a student-led initiative that tries to connect all students in the J. Percy Page High School community has remained core to what we do at PageTV.

HIGH SCHOOL IN THE TIME OF COVID-19 THE VIRUS THAT CHANGED THE WORLD

EDMONTON PUBLIC SCHOOLS

J. Percy Page High School

School is closed to all students until further notice

ADVANCED PLACEMENT
SCHOOL

When the Provincial Government announced that Alberta schools were closing in mid-March, to aid in containing the spread of the Covid-19 virus and essentially “flattening the curve” and easing the burden on our health system, a lot of questions were left hanging in the air.

How would students carry on with classes? Would Grade 12s still be graduating? Would there still be final exams?

Thankfully, it didn't take long for the staff at J. Percy Page and Alberta Education to come up with a game plan and when Spring Break wrapped up, a new style of distance learning became the norm.

Some virtual interviews were conducted with staff members to get their thoughts on this new style of learning. Principal Sutherland shares his thoughts on how school has been progressing during this uncertain time.

Darryl Sutherland, Principal: The Government's cancellation of all classes across the province on such short notice truly caught us off guard. Paralleled with that news, came the immediate uncertainty for all (students, parents and teachers) as to how long it would last; weeks, months or even longer? The way our J. Percy Page school community pulled together was truly remarkable.

Our teachers have strong collaborative networks set up in our school and within our school Division. Each of our subject area departments immediately shifted from a focus on the traditional in-person approach to a focus of remote online instruction. The most impressive part of this shift was how our technology advanced teachers immediately took on the mentoring approach with their colleagues who were less comfortable with technology. At PAGE our staff always pull together to ensure that our students are well prepared for what lies ahead. As grim as things appear in this long period of isolation, we have discovered some positives in using this new online approach to instruction.

At the top of that list is how the vast majority of our students are well prepared for the future and working in a digital world. Of course, we have contingency plans for those students who don't have access to technology at this time using hard copy curriculum packages. In general though, our students have shown that they are more than ready for anything that lies ahead.

What are some ways that you are continuing to deliver content and assignments to students?

Carla Bate, Art Teacher: I started by posting low-stress, high-success prompts for students in week 1. Students could use any material they had at home to complete a large selection of choices. My hope was to just provide students with something to help relieve anxiety in the first week, something to have when they needed a break. Now that we are in week 2, I have started asking them more specific questions, but still leaving all options open for completion. My first concern was that students were not going to have the materials they needed at home. But students have been innovative, where necessary. I'm also thankful that they have been asking me questions. We are trying very hard to keep in touch, but it hasn't been possible for all students, all the time. We are all just trying our best.

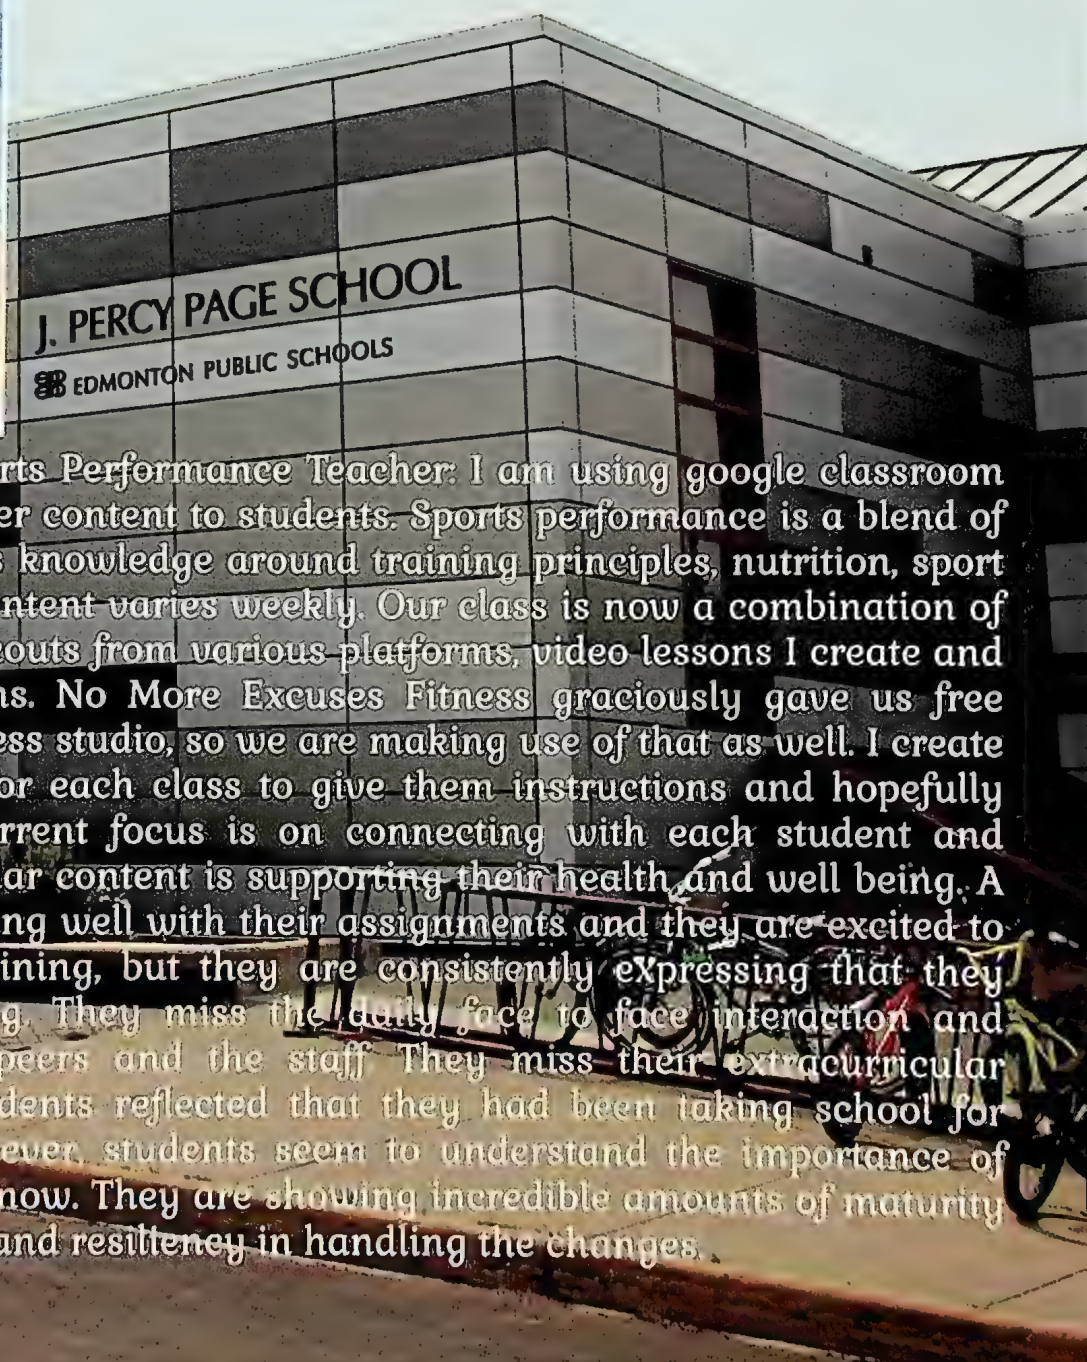

How do students seem to be coping with this major change in their education?

Anna Burn, English Teacher: I think this experience has allowed students to examine their strengths and weaknesses as learners and find opportunities to advocate for what they need. Just because students don't have to show up for school, doesn't mean they don't have to show up for themselves. I'm very proud of my students for taking ownership in identifying what they need in these unprecedented times.

Scott Shpeley, Drama/Graphic Arts Teacher:

The Drama students are meeting regularly (when they can) to stretch, check in, and do drama exercises on a Google Meet. The Graphic Arts students can use Adobe Suite at home now, and we are meeting weekly on a Google Meet, and communicating with a Google classroom. Lot's of Google!

Rachelle Williams, Sports Performance Teacher: I am using google classroom to connect with and deliver content to students. Sports performance is a blend of fitness training as well as knowledge around training principles, nutrition, sport psychology, etc., so the content varies weekly. Our class is now a combination of a variety of at home workouts from various platforms, video lessons I create and assignments or reflections. No More Excuses Fitness graciously gave us free access to their online fitness studio, so we are making use of that as well. I create weekly check in videos for each class to give them instructions and hopefully some inspiration! My current focus is on connecting with each student and ensuring that the curricular content is supporting their health and well being. A lot of my students are doing well with their assignments and they are excited to continue their fitness training, but they are consistently expressing that they miss traditional schooling. They miss the daily face to face interaction and camaraderie with their peers and the staff. They miss their extracurricular activities. One of my students reflected that they had been taking school for granted in the past. However, students seem to understand the importance of physical distancing right now. They are showing incredible amounts of maturity in expressing themselves and resiliency in handling the changes.

CoViD-19 Pandemic

I always thought that my senior year would be one of the most memorable ones, and it definitely has, just not for the reasons that I would've hoped for. It would be easy to sit down and write something that I've coated with layers of sugar, but that's denying the truth. The last four months have been hard, letting go of everything that I've been waiting for all my life.

Commencement, prom, and grad week, just to name a few. There's been countless nights crying over what was supposed to happen that night, and having to set thirty reminders to do homework or attend a google meet throughout the day because time doesn't pass anymore.

It's been really hard, and I'm sure I'm not the only senior mourning the loss of these last few months.

COVID-19 has completely changed the way my life works. Before this, I'd have to make plans and appointments three weeks in advance because I always had something going on.

Whether it was volunteering, babysitting, rehearsals or work. The only time I'd be home was when I was sleeping. Now, it's been nothing but home, and with that, almost nothing but sleep. I've had to rearrange my room three times just to be able to have a change of scenery, or going on long drives with no destination, because at least it filled the time. It's been hard having my entire life come to a halt.

Online school has been a surreal experience. As such a visual learner, it's been hard to take in the same amount of knowledge as it would be inside a class. I'm just grateful that I had an easy course load this last term, unlike some of my friends who had a full schedule of intense classes. I've been fortunate to have teachers who understand that we have not been trained to learn like this and that it's okay to struggle. Schools put such an emphasis on grades, it's been interesting to see how different I work now that they've been weighted so differently.

It took awhile to understand that this is the new normal. It's going to be the new normal for a while now, which is unfortunate but it's slowly getting easier and easier every day. The world will keep turning, and everything we've had to leave behind is waiting for us. Without a doubt, this has been a life changing experience, and I hope that I walk away from this knowing I've made the most out of this pandemic, but if I don't that's okay. I'm doing my best, and right now that's all I can do.

J. Percy Page students doing online learning and self isolating from March to June 2020.

Now that learning isn't happening in classrooms, students have found their personal style of at-home learning. When they first found out about schools being closed, no one thought it would go as long as it has. We thought we would be back after spring break but that changed. Students have had to adapt to a different learning style than what we have been doing our entire lives. Some love it, while others are dying to get back into school. This whole process of adjusting would be a lot more difficult if we didn't have the help of our teachers and technology. Here are some opinions of how students have been responding to a different method of learning.

How COVID-19 changed our lives

An adjustment like this takes a great deal of getting used to: going from a classroom of often over thirty students and a school roaming with peers, to being alone at a desk. Students such as Amber Lee are finding ways to adapt to this more independent style of education. Amber is largely involved in music and leadership programs, as well as playing a role in student engagement and communications as the anchor on J. Percy Page's PageTV. We asked her to give some insight on how these very social aspects of schooling translate to at-home learning. She replied, "It was certainly a challenge. It was going to be different; we knew that from the start, but I never imagined the success that would come from it. It was important to me that I was still able to communicate and work together with others, and we've been able to find incredibly creative ways to achieve that. Many of the groups I am involved with thrive on collaboration, so we were very uncertain about what all this would mean for us. I was quick to be reassured when I saw the dedication of those around me. That has surely been the most important thing. There would be no way we could accomplish what we have if it weren't for the admirable cooperation that occurs in the online workplace. As we continue to bring about synergy in music, as well as make a positive impact through leadership, we've come to realize all that we are capable of. It's been absolutely inspiring. I'm really proud of everyone and am super grateful for their examples. And of course, we couldn't do it without our remarkable teachers. They always put us and our well-being first, and we are super lucky to have them."

One of the students, Preetham Baddam, is involved in various sports and working out so we asked him on how he's keeping up with those activities during the quarantine. He responded with "Well it has been difficult to workout and play badminton as all recreation centres are closed; however, I've been keeping myself busy by completing home workouts. It's been difficult to stay motivated but what I found is that doing activities with family members has ensured that we continue to stay active. As the weather got warmer, we have been going on bike rides as well which not only provided physical activity but a sense of calm as the air blows by your face. In terms of playing badminton I've been staying conditioned with doing simple drills in my basement and it's been very refreshing as it provides another method in which I have been able to pass the time."

We asked all three of them how they have maintained involvement in school and what school at home looks like for them.

Amber: "Remaining involved is one of the main things that have kept me sane! I miss being able to do it in person, but I've made it a priority to do it from home nonetheless. I've been really blessed to be able to continue my signature segment from PageTV. It allows me to stay connected as well as make an impact where I can. I do it weekly, and it's been a highlight for sure! I am continuously finding new ways to make these new normals actually feel normal. I have a pretty full household, so it was quite the feat to make it align with a school schedule. I particularly look forward to being able to meet with my classes, or other groups I'm a part of. My classmates and I make an effort to stay in touch, which has been a saving grace. Our school, teachers, and overall student body are handling the situation exceptionally which has made the transition so much easier. I really feel like this is working for us! It may not be ideal, and it was very sudden, but we are making the best of the circumstances for sure."

Zinnia: "Getting involved at our high school is very easy as you can walk into a classroom and just ask the teacher if they need help with anything. Having to do school work from home definitely slows down the process of staying involved. It is harder to be present and take part in activities when you can't physically be there. Our leadership teacher at J. Percy Page has made amazing opportunities for us, students, to be getting involved with school activities. For example, we made cards for senior homes and sent them there as a reminder. Another activity a bunch of the students did was recreate a famous painting in a funny way with things you have in your house and email it to a teacher. This made a bunch of teachers smile and laugh. It was a great way to take our minds off of all the negatives in the world right now."

Preetham: "In terms of staying involved within the school community, I've been participating in the various activities that our school's Instagram page conducts, such as bingo. Additionally, a friend and I run a segment every Thursdays where we ask what students were grateful for that week. We share their responses and this allows the rest of the school to stay involved as well. Moreover, we have also continued our Student Union meetings in which we are discussing ways in which we can further safely involve the student body in activities. Just a couple weeks back, we selected next year's Student Union by using Google Meets to interview the candidates. Personally working from home is similar to working during school for me. I complete work on the day it is assigned to ensure I stay caught up with school."

Students have found their personal style of at-home learning

School looks a lot different from the house. Thankfully we have the technology to stay connected and on track with our education. I have settled into a routine of waking up around 9 and getting ready as if I would actually come to school. Although I have stayed in pajamas for a lot of days too. I keep all my binders and notebooks under my desk so it is like having a locker at home. There are benefits to this; whereas, I can do my schoolwork in my bed in pajamas or in the kitchen. But it is nowhere close to being in a classroom with friends. School at home is becoming more and more normal as we do it more."

Grad To Go 2020

Filming of speeches and musical performances

The Class of 2020 is a graduating class that I have personally been waiting for for years. In 2007, our grade twelve students started Kindergarten and, in that year, I participated in a project with then Trustee George Rice about the future of education. We worked with my junior high students to look back 12 years, at what education and school life was like in 1995, in order to project what the world and education would be like for those Kindergarten students when they were ready to graduate. My grade eight students predicted more use of individual devices, more choice in programming, and some even suggested more learning online. Those junior high students were right in so many ways but, not one of us predicted a global pandemic would shutter our schools and send long-awaited graduation ceremonies online. The Class of 2020 is a remarkable group of people. Through this challenging experience, they have taught us so much about what it means to persevere, what it means to hope, and what it means to adapt. They are resilient, they are strong, and the world will change for the better in their capable hands. Congratulations to our 2020 graduates.

TRUDEAU'S VERY BAD YEAR

Despite a not-great year for Canadian Prime Minister Justin Trudeau, his Liberal party still won re-election in October 2019. But the party's loss of 20 seats in the House of Commons reduced its one-time majority government to a minority. In February 2019, it was reported that Trudeau had pressured then minister of justice Jody Wilson-Raybould to influence a case concerning engineering firm SNC-Lavalin. Then, in June, he angered environmentalists and Indigenous people by approving the extension of the Trans Mountain pipeline from the Alberta oil sands to the B.C. coast. And in September, photos surfaced revealing his youthful love of dressing in blackface. It's no wonder Trudeau returned from his Christmas vacation sporting a beard.

MEGKIT

On January 8, 2020, Prince Harry and Meghan Markle, the Duke and Duchess of Sussex, announced plans to step back from their working roles in Britain's royal family. Initial reports claimed Queen Elizabeth was caught off guard by the announcement—which came in the form of an Instagram post from the couple, not through official royal channels. On January 18, the couple further revealed they had agreed to stop using their royal titles and move—potentially to Canada. Prince Harry has expressed wishes to keep his family out of the spotlight and away from the media circus that claimed the life of his mother, Princess Diana, in 1997.

A CHANGING OF THE GUARD

After 13 years as leader of the Green Party, Elizabeth May resigned her position following the 2019 federal election. May, who turned 65 that year, said she promised her daughter the election would be her last as party leader—though she didn't rule out another run as an MP. May, the first member of the party to win a seat in the House of Commons, said she planned to stay engaged in federal politics, especially in regard to the Green Party's foundational climate issues. Although the party had the best federal showing in its history, winning three seats, it remains far from the 12 seats required for official party status.

REDUCE, REDUCE, REDUCE

In June 2019, the federal government announced Canada would outlaw plastic straws, bags, and cutlery by 2021 as part of an effort to reduce non-recyclable waste and protect our oceans. "As parents we're at a point when we take our kids to the beach and we have to search out a patch of sand that isn't littered with straws, Styrofoam, or bottles. That's a problem," Prime Minister Justin Trudeau said at the time. Several cities have already enacted their own local bans. Currently, Canada recycles less than 10% of its plastics.

TOO MUCH ADVENTURE

Kristian Baxter, a 44-year-old Nanaimo, B.C., native, was looking to have an adventure when he visited Syria—a country that has been undergoing a civil war for nearly a decade—in November 2018. Baxter initially made contact with his mother back home on a daily basis, but went silent within a week of his arrival. It was soon discovered that he was being detained by local authorities for "violating Syrian laws." (Some accounts suggested he had been arrested for travelling with a metal detector, an item forbidden in the country.) Canadian diplomats worked closely with the Lebanese government to secure Baxter's release, which finally happened in August 2019. THE CANADIAN PRESS/Darryl Dyck

MONEY TALKS, SCHEER WALKS

When the Conservatives lost the 2019 federal election to Justin Trudeau's Liberals, party leader Andrew Scheer initially vowed to stay on and fight another day. That changed in December, when it was revealed Scheer had used party money to pay for his children's private school education without the knowledge or approval of the Conservative Fund board. In a public statement announcing his resignation, Scheer made no mention of the financial impropriety, and his office denied a connection between the scandal and his decision to step down.

A NEW REASON TO STAY UP LATE

In March 2019, NBC tapped Lilly Singh, the Canadian YouTube sensation, to take over Carson Daly's 1:35 a.m. slot when he stepped down as the host of Last Call after 18 years. Although American late night talk shows traditionally have been dominated by white, middle-aged men, Singh isn't the first woman to steer a late night show—but she is the first open bisexual and the first person of Indian descent to helm such a show on a major U.S. network. NBC let A Little Late with Lilly Singh break with tradition and film an entire season of 96 shows over three months so Singh could continue her other projects. The show debuted on September 16, 2019, to strong reviews and ratings in keeping with Daly's.

A NEW NAFTA

On December 10, 2019, after more than a year of wrangling, representatives of the United States, Mexico, and Canada—including Deputy Prime Minister Chrystia Freeland—met in Mexico City to sign what was expected to be the final version of CUSMA, the long-sought-after replacement for the North American Free Trade Agreement. Originally signed in 1994, NAFTA removed most of the trade barriers between North America's three countries, allowing for $1.4 billion worth of annual trade. U.S. President Donald Trump threatened to pull out of NAFTA if the deal wasn't revamped to address modern considerations, such as the rise of e-commerce and other digital initiatives. THE BEAUTY OF CANADA

NDP leader Jagmeet Singh has seen many firsts. He was the first visible minority to lead a major federal Canadian political party, the first turban-wearing Sikh to sit in the Ontario legislature, and in 2019, he became the first turban-wearing leader of a national party to run in a federal election. Singh retained his seat, but the NDP's overall count dropped to 24 from the 44 won in 2015. Singh faced his share of racist confrontations on the campaign trail, handling each with poise and respect—when a man in Montreal shouted at him to “cut off” his turban in order to “look like a Canadian,” Singh responded with a handshake and said, “Oh, I think Canadians look like all sorts of people. That's the beauty of Canada.”

RAISE A CUP

Hockey icon Tim Horton may be the one with his name on the sign, but it was Ron Joyce, who died in January at the age of 88, who turned the coffee and doughnut chain into a beloved national icon. Joyce, who pulled his way out of poverty to become one of the richest men in Canada, invested in the first Tim Hortons shop in 1964, eventually buying it for $10,000. He later became a partner and purchased Horton's stake in the business after his death in 1974. Joyce grew Tim Hortons from a chain of 40 stores to more than 4,000.

PARIS GRIEVES

On April 15, 2019, smoke was spotted emanating from the roof of Paris's legendary Notre-Dame cathedral. Although fire alarms eventually were triggered, the flames quickly spread across the wooden beams that made up the 859-year-old structure's roof, toppling its spire. (In a sad irony, sprinklers had never been installed in the roof—an attempt to preserve its architecture.) News of the fire spread just as quickly, as religious and non-religious alike mourned the potential loss of a gothic architectural marvel that draws more than 13,000 tourists per day. French President Emmanuel Macron insisted the cathedral would be rebuilt, and a fundraising campaign collected nearly a billion dollars in just two days.

DEAL OR NO DEAL

The U.K. was supposed to leave the European Union behind in 2019, but lawmakers continued to be stymied on how exactly the separation would work. As the original Brexit deadline of March 29, 2019, got closer, it was extended, first to April 12, then to October 31. Then prime minister Theresa May presented three different proposals for leaving the EU to the U.K. House of Commons, each of them failing. May announced her resignation on May 24, paving the way for former journalist and two-term mayor of London Boris Johnson, a longtime Brexit supporter, to become prime minister. After much wrangling, Johnson finally announced Britain would leave the EU in early 2020, with a one-year transition period to work out the final details, such as avoiding a potentially dangerous hard border in Ireland. The official separation occurred on January 31.

THE HIGHEST GLASS CEILING

On October 18, 2019, NASA astronauts Christina Koch and Jessica Meir took part in the first all-woman space walk, replacing a piece of hardware on the International Space Station's solar arrays. Fifteen women have participated in 42 space walks since 1984, but no walk has consisted exclusively of women. Koch made history again two months later when she broke the record for the longest single space flight by a U.S. woman—289 days, which she eventually extended to 328—and Koch and Meir later took part in both the second and third all-female space walks. The first all-woman space walk was originally scheduled for March, but was cancelled due to a lack of medium-sized space suits.

PRIVATE CITIZEN ARCHIE

Prince Harry and Meghan Markle, the Duke and Duchess of Sussex, welcomed their first baby, Archie Harrison Mountbatten-Windsor, on May 6, 2019. Several countries marked the occasion—both the London Eye and Niagara Falls were lit up in celebration of the latest addition to the House of Windsor. Baby Archie holds dual U.S.-British citizenship, thanks to Markle's American origins, though he will not receive a royal title, in keeping with the Duke and Duchess's wishes that he be raised as a private citizen.

"HOW DARE YOU"

Greta Thunberg, the Swedish teenage activist, continued speaking truth to power in 2019, warning about the dangers of climate change and expressing anger over the environmental problems her generation will inherit. She addressed the U.K. Parliament on April 23, 2019, and travelled to New York City by boat in September to protest at the United Nations and address the General Assembly, which she condemned for not taking enough action to combat climate change, stating, "How dare you." Along the way she seemed to relish being mocked by U.S. President Donald Trump. At the end of the year she appeared on the cover of Time magazine as its Person of the Year, and in January she was nominated for the Nobel Peace Prize.

THE WRATH OF HURRICANE DORIAN

The worst natural disaster in Bahamas history began as a tropical wave in the Atlantic Ocean on August 24, 2019. Transforming into a storm over the Lesser Antilles and becoming a full-blown hurricane four days later, Hurricane Dorian was the most intense tropical cyclone ever to strike the country. Dorian quickly intensified, peaking with one-minute sustained winds of 185 miles per hour by September 1. Although it began to lose steam in the days that followed, Dorian still did considerable damage to Nova Scotia and Newfoundland on September 8, before finally dissipating near Greenland two days later. Dorian's heavy rain and winds destroyed thousands of homes and killed at least 73 people, with hundreds more reported missing by year's end. The cost of the damage was estimated at more than $3 billion.

A WORLDWIDE CRISIS

In November, a collaborative study written by dozens of scientists declared the world was facing a major climate emergency. The study, which was endorsed by 11,000 scientists from 153 countries, warned that a "climate crisis has arrived and is accelerating faster than most scientists expected. It is more severe than anticipated, threatening natural ecosystems and the fate of humanity." The authors encouraged immediate action, including ending the reliance on fossil fuels, ceasing the clearcutting of forests, and reducing meat consumption. The study was published on the occasion of the 40th anniversary of the first world climate conference, held in Geneva in 1979.

A CHANGING KINGDOM

Saudi Prince Mohammed bin Salman continued his reforms of the kingdom's oppressive guardianship system in 2019, extending a number of new rights to the country's women. Saudi women can now obtain a passport and travel without the permission of a male relative; request government documents and register births, marriages, and divorces; attend sporting events; and receive equal treatment in the workplace. The prince's vision for reform includes diversification of the country's economy and looser social restrictions.

FUGITIVE NO MORE

Wikileaks co-founder Julian Assange was arrested by London police on April 11, 2019, after the city's Ecuadorian embassy, where he had been living for seven years, withdrew its asylum protection. Assange originally faced sex offence allegations in Sweden, an investigation the country has since dropped. However, he is still wanted in the U.S., where he faces 18 charges related to hacking U.S. government computers. As of January 2020, he was awaiting a hearing to decide whether he would be extradited to the U.S. to face trial.

HOW A BILL DOESN'T BECOME LAW

Protests erupted in Hong Kong following the proposal of a bill that could have seen criminal fugitives extradited to areas where the country had no extradition treaties, including mainland China. Citizens worried the bill would put residents and visitors a step too close to falling under China's jurisdiction, undermining Hong Kong's autonomy and the civil liberties of its people. A protest of the bill's second reading on June 12, 2019, resulted in police shooting tear gas and rubber bullets. The bill was eventually withdrawn, but the Central People's Government called the protests surrounding the extradition bill the "worst crisis in Hong Kong" since it was returned to Chinese rule in 1997.

THE NEW QUEEN OF POP

Taylor Swift has broken many records in her music career. This year, she took down one of the giants, beating Michael Jackson's record for most American Music Awards. Swift took home six trophies on November 24, 2019—including prizes for favourite pop/rock album and artist of the year—bringing her career total to 29, five more than Jackson amassed before his death in 2009. Swift was also named the AMAs artist of the decade, an honor Jackson won in 2000.

DOLLY PARTON:

RENAISSANCE WOMAN

Dolly Parton has always been an enigma: a feminist icon who doesn't like to call herself a feminist. In any case, it seems to be working. Parton had something of a renaissance in 2019: she inspired both a podcast (Dolly Parton's America) and a Netflix series (Dolly Parton's Heartstrings) and appeared as the featured vocalist on an EDM song by Swedish group Galantis. On top of that, she's got nearly five million Twitter followers who tune in for her self-aware "Jolene" memes.

LIZZO TAKES THE WORLD BY STORM

Lizzo came along exactly when the world needed some unbridled joy and positivity. Cuz I Love You, the 31-year-old singer's major-label debut album, released in April 2019, gave listeners a reason to get up and dance, with its funky mix of soul and hip hop and a little classical flute thrown in for good measure. But what really set Lizzo apart was her body-positive attitude and strong feminist message. In December, Time magazine named her its entertainer of the year.

UP IN SMOKE

In 2008, a fire swept the backlot of Universal Studios Hollywood, damaging several buildings, including the Back to the Future courthouse, a New York streetscape, and Building 6187—a storage library for audio master tapes of some of the best-selling recording artists in history. Universal initially assured the public that nothing significant had been lost. But a New York Times investigation published on June 11, 2019, revealed the opposite to be true. Nearly 200,000 master tapes were likely lost in the fire, the work of artists ranging from Chuck Berry to Nirvana—a staggering loss to music history. AP Photo/APTN

WHEN WE WIN ALL THE GRAMMYS

Billie Eilish dominated the Grammys on January 26, 2020, taking home the ceremony's four top prizes—song of the year, best new artist, record of the year, and album of the year—as well as the award for best pop vocal album. Eilish—whose debut album, When We All Fall Asleep, Where Do We Go?, was released in 2019—was only 17 when nominations were announced in November, making her the youngest artist ever simultaneously nominated in all four general categories. The artist's win capped off a big month, which also saw Eilish named Billboard's 2019 woman of the year and announced as the performer of the title track to next James Bond film, No Time to Die.

A LONG AND WINDING ROAD

Lil Nas X's masterful and unique combination of musical styles earned him a hit with "Old Town Road," a song that belongs squarely in the recently created genre of country rap. The song gained popularity following its original release in December 2018, thanks in part to its video on TikTok. "Old Town Road" was making its way up Billboard's country chart when it was disqualified for not meeting the definition of country music. But that didn't stop a remix recorded with country star Billy Ray Cyrus from reaching the No. 1 spot on Billboard's flagship Hot 100 chart on April 13, 2019—where it stayed for a record-breaking 19 weeks.

BEST GIFT EVER

Most of the popular Christmas songs we hear each year have been standard favorites for decades, and breaking into that club isn't easy. One song that succeeded is Mariah Carey's "All I Want For Christmas," originally released in 1994. The song has not only received annual play ever since, but each year it manages to inch its way a little further up the charts. In 2018, it reached a high of No. 3 on Billboard's Hot 100. This year, in celebration of its 25th anniversary, fans gave Carey a Christmas gift by pushing it to No. 1—the first holiday song to top the chart since "The Chipmunk Song" in 1958.

ARIANA GRANDE TOPS THE BEATLES

The Beatles proved their staying power in 2019—a 50th anniversary reissue of 1969's Abbey Road became a top-selling album in several countries. But elsewhere on the charts, Ariana Grande was catching up to them. On February 19, 2019, she became the first artist to simultaneously hold the top three spots on Billboard's Hot 100 songs chart since the Fab Four pulled off the same feat in 1964. All 12 of the songs from Grande's album Thank U, Next charted on Billboard, with only one failing to make the Top 40. This allowed Grande to break another record: most simultaneous Top 40 Billboard Hot 100 hits by a female artist.

SHE WORKS HARD FOR THE MONEY

Being one of the world's best-selling musical artists has never been enough for Rihanna. She also runs a fashion company, a cosmetics line, a lingerie business, and a foundation supporting health and education in impoverished areas. The Grammy-winning singer says money isn't her driving force, but that hasn't stopped her from amassing more of it than any other female artist. In June, Forbes magazine named Rihanna the world's richest female musician, estimating her fortune at $600 million. Madonna was listed as second-richest, at $570 million, followed by Celine Dion ($450 million), and Beyoncé and Barbra Streisand (tied at $400 million each).

THEY

WORD OF THE YEAR

"They" is one of the most basic words in English, officially used as a third-person plural pronoun. In December 2019, Merriam-Webster named "they" its word of the year, recognizing it for all the extra hours it's spent filling in as a singular gender-neutral pronoun. That secondary use has taken on more meaning in recent years, as the word has been embraced by the non-binary community to refer to those who identify as neither male nor female—a third usage Webster's has now added to its online dictionary. According to Merriam-Webster, searches for "they" increased 313% in 2019 over the previous year.

BOOMER

THE MEME OF A NEW GENERATION

Millennials scored a point in the generation war when it found the perfect meme to mock and dismiss its elders. "OK Boomer" originally was coined in 2009, but the phrase gained popularity in early 2019 when it was used in a popular TikTok video showing an older man criticizing millennials for holding on to their youthful utopian ideas. Some called the phrase ageist, but its popularity continued, spawning countless parodies and thinkpieces. Like all anti-establishment sentiments, it wasn't long before OK Boomer was co-opted for financial gain: an art student made more than $25,000 selling a hoodie featuring the phrase, and several companies, including Fox Media, have attempted to trademark it.

◀ HOW DO YOU SPELL "WINNERS"?

In 94 years, the famous Scripps National Spelling Bee has never ended in more than a two-way tie. That changed on May 30, 2019, when eight contestants out-spelled the dictionary. Organizers failed to stump the young players, who ranged in age from 12 to 14, despite throwing words at them for the better part of a day. Shortly after midnight, the historic eight-way tie was called. Each contestant received the full $50,000 prize.

RE-BAN

Alex Jones, the far-right conspiracy theorist and founder of fake news website Infowars, was banned from nearly every social media platform in 2018, but his Facebook ban proved to be short-lived, as the platform continues to figure out whether or not it should police lies and hate speech. On May 2, 2019, Jones was banned from Facebook for a second time, along with several other controversial figures, including Louis Farrakhan and Milo Yiannopoulos. Jones quickly created a new account, which was also removed. Among his outlandish theories, Jones has accused Hillary Clinton of being a demon (literally) and claimed the Sandy Hook school shooting was a hoax.

THE KONMARI PARADOX

Marie Kondo's profile was raised significantly in 2019, thanks to her hit Netflix series, Tidying Up with Marie Kondo. The 34-year-old Japanese organizing consultant convinced millions of viewers to follow her KonMari method, which involves picking up every item in their home and asking themselves if it "sparks joy." Some of Kondo's suggestions, such as keeping no more than 30 books, sparked more backlash than joy—as did the irony of the November launch of her online store offering exactly the type of knick-knacks she promotes getting rid of.

IT IS WHAT IT IS

Fast food chain Popeyes launched its first chicken sandwich in August, prompting a Twitter feud with Chick-fil-A over which restaurant's sandwich was better. Popeyes encouraged followers to try its sandwich for themselves, unexpectedly resulting in hours-long lines and, unfortunately in some cases, rioting. Popeyes ran out of its chicken sandwiches—a product two years in the making—in less than a month. The product returned permanently in the fall, its Twitter feud won.

A TASTE OF SUCCESS

Beyond Meat, the U.S.-based producer of plant-based meat substitutes—most famously the Beyond Meat burger—went public on May 2, 2019. By July, the company's value had skyrocketed from an initial $3.8 billion to $11.7 billion. Over the course of the year, the company expanded its offerings and launched new partnerships with a number of meat-centric restaurant chains, including Dunkin', KFC, and McDonald's.

Ride-share services Uber and Lyft and workspace real estate company WeWork all planned highly anticipated initial public offerings in 2019. But instead of earning their investors high returns, all three ended up as poster children for the dangers of overvaluing hot tech startups. Within months of their IPOs, Uber and Lyft were trading for less than half of their initial market caps, while WeWork ended up scrapping its IPO entirely.

A TALE OF HOPE

The Handmaid's Tale, Margaret Atwood's 1985 dystopian novel about a patriarchal society, underwent a resurgence in 2017 when Hulu released a TV adaptation (now entering its fourth season), starring Elisabeth Moss and produced by Atwood herself. The book became a touchpoint for women in the Me Too era, with protestors frequently donning handmaids' cloaks and bonnets. In September 2019, Atwood released a sequel, The Testaments. The book, with an initial print run of 500,000, was critically well-received and won the Man Booker Prize. Rather than revisit the nightmare scenario of her original story, Atwood opted to make her new book a tale of hope for the defeat of misogyny.

CELEBRITY PASSINGS

Toni Morrison, who died in 2019 at the age of 88, became one of the greatest chroniclers of Black life in America through books such as Beloved and Song of Solomon, and was an inspiration to both readers and writers. Other entertainment figures who died this year included fashion icon Gloria Vanderbilt, character actor Rip Torn (The Larry Sanders Show), Broadway star Carol Channing (Hello, Dolly!), social media celebrity Grumpy Cat, and—briefly—Planter's mascot Mr. Peanut.

A MINUS FOR APPLE TV+

Apple is known for disrupting established industries. So when the company announced it would launch its long-awaited TV streaming service on November 1, 2019, many wondered what that would mean for Netflix and Hulu. Early reviews of Apple TV+'s initial slate of programming were not overly positive, however. Its flagship Morning Show, starring Jennifer Aniston and Reese Witherspoon, earned especially poor reviews. Meanwhile, Disney launched its own streaming service, Disney+, two weeks later, and scored a quick hit with its Star Wars spinoff, The Mandalorian.

PHOEBE WALLER-BRIDGE'S BIG YEAR

Phoebe Waller-Bridge was already a highly praised writer and actress going into 2019, thanks to the first season of her critically acclaimed Amazon Prime show, Fleabag, and the stage show on which it was based. Her star rose even higher this year: Critics loved Fleabag's second season, which debuted in April 2019 and won six Emmys and a Golden Globe; Waller-Bridge took her original Fleabag show back to the stage over the summer, receiving more positive reviews; HBO greenlit a new show she co-created; and she was tapped to co-write the screenplay of the 25th James Bond movie, No Time to Die.

SUNNY DAYS

When Joan Ganz Cooney conceived of Sesame Street—which celebrated 50 years on television in 2019—the idea of an educational show for preschoolers based on academic research was groundbreaking. Today, it's hard to imagine a time when Big Bird, Oscar, and Cookie Monster weren't a part of growing up. Some early critics felt the show's fast pace and short segments would harm children's attention spans, but initial mixed reviews quickly faded, and there are now more than 150 versions of Sesame Street shown around the world, in 70 languages.

GAME OVER

Game of Thrones, the HBO series based (at least initially) on A Song of Ice and Fire, a series of fantasy novels by George R.R. Martin, became a ratings juggernaut over the course of its eight-season run. Fans disappointed by the show's final episode, which aired on May 19, 2019, might eventually get a do-over. Game of Thrones surpassed the source material of Martin's still unfinished book series after Season 5. Martin has said the books will have a slightly different ending—though when they will be released has been anyone's guess for years. Martin's last book in the series was published nearly a decade ago, with two books still in progress.

CELEBRITY PASSINGS

Beloved '90s teen heartthrob Luke Perry was having a comeback when he died of a stroke on March 4, 2019, at the age of 52. The cast of Riverdale, the CW show in which Perry played Fred Andrews, father of Archie, devoted a special episode to Perry on October 9, featuring a guest appearance by his former Beverly Hills, 90210 co-star Sherry Doherty. Other celebrities who left us last year included Carol Spinney (Sesame Street's Big Bird and Oscar the Grouch), Valerie Harper (The Mary Tyler Moore Show), Peggy Lipton (The Mod Squad, Twin Peaks), singer and actress Diahann Carroll, Tim Conway (The Carol Burnett Show), and Katherine Helmond (Soap, Who's the Boss?).

STRONG ON THE HEARTSTRINGS THIS ONE PULLS

With Star Wars fans divided on the franchise's new direction under Disney, a hero was needed to bring balance to the toxicity overtaking social media. Enter "Baby Yoda," a character everyone seems to agree is the best thing to happen to the galaxy far, far away since, well, adult Yoda. Baby Yoda—who, spoiler, is not actually Yoda as a baby—was introduced in the first episode of The Mandalorian, a Star Wars spinoff that debuted November 12, 2019, on Disney+. The character quickly became the one thing fans didn't realize they had been missing in their lives.

AVENGERS DISASSEMBLED

After 10 years and 22 films, Avengers: Endgame closed a major chapter in the highly successful series of interconnected movies based on the characters of Marvel comics. It also retired several popular favorites, including Robert Downey Jr.'s Iron Man, the hero whose eponymous first movie kicked off the series in 2008. Although Endgame received only a single Oscar nomination, the movie earned near universal praise and $2.8 billion at the box office, making it the highest-grossing film of all time.

WAIT'LL THEY GET A LOAD OF HIM

Can you have a Joker movie without Batman? Should you? That was just one of the questions surrounding the release of Joker, an origin story of the caped crusader's longtime nemesis, played by Joaquin Phoenix. Joker's new take on the character was decidedly different than Heath Ledger's famous turn in 2008's The Dark Knight, and led many critics to call the film an incel training manual. Joker still went on to become the highest-grossing R-rated movie in history and was nominated for 11 Oscars.

THE LAST BOW OF SKYWALKER

Star Wars: The Rise of Skywalker brought to a close a story that began a long time ago—42 years, to be exact. Many felt this ninth installment was better than 2017's The Last Jedi but were still decidedly mixed on whether director J.J. Abrams did justice to the beloved original trilogy or ruined their childhood.

LEGENDS WHO LEFT US

Although Peter Mayhew, who died on April 30, 2019 at the age of 74, relinquished the role of Chewbacca in the Star Wars films after 2015's The Force Awakens, fans will always consider him the one true Wookiee. Other Hollywood stars who died last year included the multitasking Doris Day (The Man Who Knew Too Much, The Pajama Game), producer Robert Evans (The Godfather, Chinatown), and actor Peter Fonda (Easy Rider).

A HERO WITH THE POWER TO DESTROY ALL COMPETITION

Captain Marvel is the most powerful hero among the Marvel Comics characters. But saving the universe was nothing compared to convincing Hollywood that a female superhero could carry a major motion picture. Captain Marvel, starring Brie Larson in the title role, earned more than $1 billion—the first female superhero movie to do so—making it Marvel's seventh biggest film. Captain Marvel was the first of Marvel's now 22 films to feature a female lead, but Larson has already suited up to make a sequel, and the female-led Black Widow, starring Scarlett Johansson, is due this year.

SCORSESE BREAKS NEW GROUND

With The Irishman, legendary director Martin Scorsese went back to his roots, crafting a real American crime drama with many of the genre's best actors, including Robert De Niro, Al Pacino, and Joe Pesci. But the movie is more than a throwback. The Irishman employed cutting edge CGI to de-age several of its actors, and was available on Netflix on November 27, 2019, only three weeks after a limited theatrical run. Netflix, which rarely releases viewership figures, said in December the film had been viewed by 26 million accounts, making it the platform's fifth most popular release ever.

MOST EXCELLENT

Fans of Keanu Reeves have reported enough genuine, respectful interactions with the public over the years that the actor has been dubbed the Internet's boyfriend. Despite the thought of losing him, fans still swooned at the news in November 2019 that Reeves, 55, was dating artist and longtime friend Alexandra Grant, 46—the first relationship he'd made public in more than a decade and one, in keeping with his respectful nature, deemed "age appropriate."

A CAT VIDEO NO ONE WANTS TO WATCH

Audiences were seriously creeped out by the sight of Judi Dench, Jennifer Hudson, and Taylor Swift sporting CGI-generated cat ears and fur when Universal Pictures released the first trailer for a big-screen adaptation of Cats, one of the highest-grossing stage musicals of all time. Reaction was so negative that the studio went back and tweaked the effects before the film's release on December 20, 2019. But it wasn't enough: critics were less than generous and audiences stayed away in droves, leading to a $100 million loss that some dubbed the biggest Hollywood disaster of the decade.

THEY ARE THE CHAMPIONS

The U.S. women's soccer team entered the 2019 World Cup with three previous championships and a defiant attitude. While many criticized the way players celebrated every goal on the field as arrogant, the team earned its celebratory ways, outscoring its opponents in the tournament 26–3. Team co-captain Megan Rapinoe won both the Golden Boot, as the Cup's top scorer, and the Golden Ball, for being its overall best player. She was also the tournament's most polarizing figure. The openly gay midfielder refused to sing or place her hand on her heart during the U.S. national anthem as a protest against racial injustice and oppression.

GAMES FOR ALL

The Canada Games has long prided itself on being more progressive than other sports associations. On February 18, 2019, the organization announced it would allow athletes to compete as their identified gender. Its new policy states the organization recognizes that "sex and gender are not the same thing," and that it aims to create "a safe and welcoming environment for transgender or intersex participants at the Canada Games."

A RECORD-SETTING WIN

On June 13, 2019, the Toronto Raptors beat the Golden State Warriors in Game 6 of the NBA playoffs, winning their first championship in the team's 24-season history. The Raptors became the first Canadian team to win an NBA title, as well as the first sports team in the country to win a major league championship since the Toronto Blue Jays won two World Series back to back in 1992 and 1993. Fans immediately took to the streets in celebration, and a parade held in the team's honour a few days later drew, by some estimates, two million fans.

RUSSIA BANNED FROM OLYMPICS

Russia's collection of Olympic medals is second only to the United States'. There's one area, however, where Russia has the U.S. beat: a record 43 medals stripped due to doping. On December 9, 2019, the World Anti-Doping Agency decided it had had enough and banned Russia from the all international sports competition, including the Olympics, for four years. (Russia previously was banned from the 2018 Games.) This means the country can't compete in either the 2020 Tokyo Games or the Winter Games in Beijing in 2022.

BIANCA ANDREESCU RISES TO THE TOP

Canadian tennis star Bianca Andreescu had a breakout year in 2019. She quickly rose through the ranks of the Women's Tennis Association, finishing runner-up at the Auckland Open, reaching the second round of the Australian Open, and winning a WTA 125K title at the Oracle Challenger Series in Newport Beach. On October 21, 2019, she became the top-ranked player on the WTA Tour. But her crowning achievement came on September 7, when she won her first Grand Slam title at the U.S. Open by defeating Serena Williams, making Andreescu the first Canadian to win a Grand Slam singles title and the No. 5 ranked player in the world. Andreescu also became the first tennis player to win the Lou Marsh Trophy, an award given annually by a panel of Canadian sportswriters to the person deemed Canada's top athlete.

TWO FIRST MAJOR LEAGUE WINS

The sporting world saw two big firsts in 2019, one of which was long overdue. The St. Louis Blues, Philadelphia's 52-year-old NHL franchise, started the year in dead last place out of 31 teams. Thanks to rookie goalie Jordan Binnington and a solid defence, the Blues fought their way to the Stanley Cup finals, defeating the Boston Bruins on their home ice to capture their first league win. Meanwhile, D.C. saw its first World Series victory in nearly a century, when the Washington Nationals beat the Houston Astros in the seventh game of the World Series, taking home the team's first pennant in its 15-season history.

EVEN FOOTBALL FANS LOVE CAT VIDEOS

A black cat covered more ground more quickly than any player during a November 4, 2019, NFL game between the Dallas Cowboys and the New York Giants. The cat, reportedly a stray that lives in the bleachers of MetLife Stadium, was spotted on the field during the second quarter, stopping play and captivating viewers of Monday Night Football.

MISSION: IMPOSSIBLE

Mike Babcock had a solid coaching record: He took the Detroit Red Wings to Stanley Cup victory in 2008, got the Anaheim Mighty Ducks to the finals in 2003, and helped the Canadian men's hockey team win Olympic gold in 2010 and 2014. But he had obviously never encountered a challenge like the Toronto Maple Leafs, a team that hasn't won the Stanley Cup since 1967. When Babcock signed a $50-million, eight-year contract with the Leafs in 2015, hopes of success were high. But Babcock was unable to get the team past the first round of playoffs in three seasons. He was fired on November 20, 2019, after a six-game losing streak.

DON CHERRY SENT TO A DIFFERENT CORNER

Hockey Night in Canada is a Canadian institution. To many, Don Cherry's Coach's Corner, a segment he co-hosted during the show's first intermission for nearly 40 years, was just as much of one. But to others, the opinionated former coach in garish suits was an embarrassment to the game and the country. Cherry coasted on his reputation for years, but on November 11, 2019, it finally caught up with him: Cherry was fired by Sportsnet, producer of Hockey Night in Canada, after he derided new immigrants on air for not wearing a Remembrance Day poppy. The National Hockey League denounced Cherry's statement, as did many members of the media and the general public.

A SAD DAY FOR BASKETBALL

On January 28, 2020, a helicopter carrying basketball legend Kobe Bryant, his 13-year-old daughter Gianna, and six family friends crashed into the side of a mountain north of Los Angeles, killing everyone aboard, including the pilot. The exact cause of the crash wasn't immediately known, but the copter was flying in extreme fog that hampered visibility. The L.A. Lakers, Bryant's team for his entire 20-year NBA career, paid an emotional tribute a few days later during a memorial game against the Portland Trail Blazers, featuring performances by Usher and Boys II Men.

MEET THE NEW NEIGHBORS

Oops. Any Star Trek fan can tell you that introducing an alien species to foreign planets is a no-no. But that's exactly what happened in April 2019, when an Israeli lander crashed on the surface of the moon, stranding thousands of microscopic dehydrated tardigrades, also known as water bears. In most cases, this wouldn't be a problem, but water bears have already proven to be considerably resilient and able to survive the vacuum of space. If anyone crashes a glass of water next to them, they might be greeting us on our next visit.

HOPE FOR A CURE

On March 5, 2019, it was announced that an HIV-positive patient was showing no evidence of the disease after receiving a stem-cell transplant that replaced infected white blood cells with HIV-resistant ones. The patient, who remained unidentified, had been off their antiretroviral treatment drugs for 18 months and continued to show no signs of the disease returning. A similar treatment was undertaken a decade ago on a patient who also remains free of HIV. Scientists say it is too early to say whether this new patient is definitely HIV free, but it is the most hope they've had of curing the disease to date.

TESLA CYBERTRUCK UNVEILING GOES WRONG

Tesla CEO Elon Musk hoped the company's new Cybertruck would make a splash at its November 2019 unveiling. Unfortunately, the launch of the electric battery-powered light commercial vehicle might end up being remembered less for the Cybertruck's demonstrated speed and sustainability than for the failure of its armored glass window during an onstage test. The window had passed at least one earlier test before the unveiling, but when Tesla's design chief threw a metal ball at the glass, it shattered in front of the assembled media and invited guests. Production of the Cybertruck is expected to begin in 2021.

OPPORTUNITY KNOCKS OFF

Opportunity, the flat-topped rover that charmed space exploration fans when it landed on the surface of Mars 15 years ago, was built to last just 90 Martian days and travel no more than 1,100 yards. Not only did it exceed its expected lifespan 60 times over, it traveled a lifetime total of 28 miles over the planet's surface. Opportunity went quiet in 2018 in the appropriately named Perseverance Valley, following a severe dust storm. At first NASA hoped the rover might reboot, but eventually it announced the completion of Opportunity's mission on February 13, 2019. The information collected by Opportunity will help NASA undertake an eventual manned mission to the red planet.

A NATURE EMERGENCY

A report delivered by the United Nations in May 2019—written by hundreds of experts from more than 50 countries—said up to one million species on Earth are currently threatened with extinction, some within the next few decades. The report called the number "unprecedented in human history," and blames human intrusion into natural habitats. It warns that a decreased biodiversity could take away many of the resources humans need to survive, such as trees and plants.
